WHO ARE THE TOP ad spenders? How much does a TV ad cost? Which agencies are the largest? Who are the big media players? Keep the FactPack on your computer or network, and all this information will be a click away.

The FactPack is presented in three sections: Advertising and Marketing, Media and Agency Business.

Most of the data in the Advertising section was taken from AD AGE's annual Leading National Advertisers, now in its 47th year. The Special Report ranks the largest advertisers in the U.S. by ad spending. It also covers key industries by market share.

Coverage of Media spans the year. Data shown in that category were taken from many different issues of Ad Age. The 100 Leading Media Companies ranks the top companies by total net media revenue, as well as by media specialty.

The Agency Report may be Ad Age's most comprehensive report. The 58th annual Special Report ranks more than 500 agencies in the U.S. and nearly 1,600 agencies in 124 countries.

Red type and ovals throughout this booklet indicate that a more comprehensive ranking is posted on AdAge.com/datacenter.cms or point to a section within the DataCenter containing more data on the topic.

Methodologies for leading advertisers and megabrands advertising spending rankings

THE 100 LEADING NATIONAL ADVERTISERS are selected from the 250 largest national advertisers based on measured U.S. media spending in 2001. That group is pared to 100 after estimated unmeasured expenditures are added. All ad spending figures throughout this report are U.S. only.

Measured media advertising is spending in 13 national consumer media monitored by Taylor Nelson Sofres' CMR, Internet from CMRinteractive, and Yellow Pages from Yellow Pages Integrated Media Assn.

Unmeasured spending is an Ad Age estimate and includes direct mail, promotion, co-op, couponing, catalogs, business and farm publications and special events, to name a few. Unmeasured is the difference between a company's reported or estimated ad costs and its measured media.

A company's reported ad costs, typically worldwide, are found generally in public documents and are weighted to reflect a U.S.-only percentage. Unmeasured for private companies is modeled to that of their publicly held direct competitors.

Megabrands is Ad Age's name for all brands, products and services with the same name. For example, Kraft cheeses and Kraft dinners are combined to create Kraft foods. The AT&T megabrand includes brands now owned by separate companies: AT&T Corp. and AT&T Wireless.

Market share data are compiled from leading industry sources, including Information Resources Inc., the U.S. Bureau of Transportation and others.

Methodologies for media-related rankings

THE 100 LEADING MEDIA COMPANIES ranking at right ranks U.S. media companies by U.S. net revenue from media properties which may or may not equate to total corporate revenue.

Figures are for the most recent fiscal reporting period (most generally calendar 2001). Sources include BIA Research for radio and TV, Duncan's Radio market Guide for radio and Paul Kagan Associates for cable networks.

Figures are taken from public documents when available, and/or obtained from company contacts.

Because Ad Age's definition of media often is less encompassing than a media company's segment reporting, figures should be considered estimates for public and private companies alike. Ad Age broadly defines media as media distribution businesses supported by advertising.

Excluded by this definition would be media company operations including book publishing, book and record clubs, movie and TV production, media-buying services, electronic retailing, paper mills, wireless services, and trade show divisions. Yellow Pages also are excluded.

Other media rankings are from leading industry monitoring services such as Publishers Information Bureau, Taylor Nelson Sofres' CMR and Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Methodologies for ranking ad agencies

THE 58TH ANNUAL Advertising Age Agency Report includes five major agency rankings: the world's top advertising organizations; the leading U.S. ad agency "brands;" the top U.S.-based consolidated agency networks, and the U.S. agency rankings by multicultural specialty.

World's top ad organizations: An ad organization may be either an agency or agency holding company and qualifies for the ranking if it owns 50%-plus of itself.

U.S. ad agency brands: The ranking of U.S. ad agencies is for ad agencies, including healthcare and business-to-business shops. This "brand" chart previously ranked ad agencies and all specialties. Agency branding identifies the core agency by stripping the contributions from subsidiaries and specialty units.

Consolidated U.S. agency networks: The ranking of the top U.S.-based agencies on a consolidated basis reassembles the multitiered agencies (unbundled for branding) to include all subsidiaries and specialty units, except non-agency marketing functions such as PR and research.

Public relations rankings: The top U.S. public relations companies are ranked by worldwide fee income. Data for the PR charts were provided by the Council of Public Relations Firms, whose methodology treats acquisitions and divestitures as if they were on or off the books for two full years.

Media specialist rankings: The top media specialist companies, independents and inhouse media dependents, are ranked by U.S. and worldwide media purchases.

Twenty-five-year review of top 500 U.S. agency brands: Agency brands include sales promotion and direct marketing.

SUPERAGENCY BUSINESS MARKET SHARE

$39.28 billion worldwide gross income represents advertising business returns from all agencies in the Agency Report, including direct marketing and sales promotion shops. Excluded are interactive, public relations, research and other non-advertising. Worldwide gross income for advertising organizations overall will be higher than the figures shown. For example, Interpublic had total worldwide gross income of $7.98 billion in 2001. Specialty shops, PR and research companies and investments make up the difference. *Publicis is seeking to merge with Bcom3 Group by year's end giving it a combined 10.9% of the world ad market.

25 YEAR U.S. AGENCY REVIEW

From the Agency Report for years shown. Figures represent total gross income and billings for the top 500 U.S.-based agencies. Dollars are in billions. *A depressed U.S. dollar in 1987 and 1988 contributed to the huge jumps in foreign gross income and billings for U.S. agencies. During this two-year period, the dollar was down about 15% versus the Japanese yen, 14% vs. the West German deutschmark and 10% vs. the British pound and French franc. Additionally, during this period U.S. agencies were rapidly acquiring overseas shops.
